Dr. Tom Hunsaker is a business leader, professor, and advisor to firms with the potential to redefine their markets. He began his research and teaching career on the faculty of the world's top-ranked global management school, Thunderbird School of Global Management, where he teaches in the areas of competitive strategy and performance leadership and has served as a faculty-lead in the Thunderbird Emerging Market Laboratory (TEMLab). With TEMLab, he has assisted student-driven strategic consulting engagements in Latin America, Africa, and Asia. Professor Hunsaker has authored prominent work in the areas of innovation management, strategy, leadership, and higher education. He is author (with Dr. Nathan Washburn of Thunderbird) of the 'Bridger(TM)' model, originally published in Harvard Business Review, which provides insight into how people can best serve as conduits for innovative ideas in organizational settings. Dr. Hunsaker's work has appeared in Harvard Business Review, Business & Economy, Research in Higher Education, Learning in Higher Education, and on Businessweek, Bloomberg, and Business & Economy online, among other practitioner and scholarly outlets. Professor Hunsaker enjoys extensive international experience. He has consulted or worked for companies located in North America, Latin America, Europe, Asia, and Africa - with a particular expertise in Latin America. Among his favorite places in the world to visit is Ecuador, where he has served as a visiting professor. Dr. Hunsaker graduated from BYU (B.A) prior to receiving three advanced degrees (M.A./M.B.A/Ph.D.) concentrated in economic development, business administration, and sociology (UNM). A devoted teacher and speaker, he speaks English and Spanish and addresses audiences in each. Tom currently resides in the sunshine of Arizona with
