

10,000 WOMEN

Business Women's Training Program

The American University of Afghanistan, in partnership with the Thunderbird School of Global Management in Glendale Arizona, is administering a business training and support program for Afghan women. The program is part of the larger '10,000 Women' initiative sponsored by Goldman Sachs that supports partnerships between business education programs in the United States and Europe, and business schools in emerging economies.

Between November 2008 and April 2009 The Goldman Sachs Business Women's Training Program in Afghanistan, will be delivered at the American University of Afghanistan in Kabul. The program will provide 40 hours of in class business training to 60 women over this timeframe and all classes will be conducted in Dari/Farsi.

The curriculum for the business training program will be developed by faculty at Thunderbird School of Global Management, ranked by the Financial Times as the number one school in international management, in collaboration with business women in Afghanistan. It will include basic business training in entrepreneurship, marketing, management, accounting and finance, networking, and strategic planning. Thunderbird will also work closely with AUAF to increase capacity at the University.

management, the women will be given access to a resource center on AUAF's campus, where there will be computers, books, and meeting space available for their use during the course, and after they have completed their training. Women will also have access to mentors, opportunities for internships and networking events. As a result of this training, participants will gain higher levels of financial self-sustainability and be able to further contribute to the development of the Afghan economy.
